

Purpose of Special Education

The purpose of special education is to ensure that all children with disabilities have available to them a "free appropriate public education" that emphasizes special education and related services "designed to meet their unique needs and prepare them for further education, employment, and independent living." Special education services are provided at no cost to the parents and must be provided in the "least restrictive environment".

Special education is instruction that is specially designed to meet the unique needs of a child with a disability. This means education that is individually developed to address a specific child's needs that result from his or her disability. Each child is unique, so special education is individualized for each child.

Procedural Safeguards

Procedural safeguards inform parents about the rights and protections available under Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA).

Procedural safeguards are designed to protect the rights of parents, and their child, and provide a way to resolve their disputes.

Some examples of procedural safeguards include the right to:

- Disagree with decisions that the school system makes
 - Use IDEA's dispute resolution options
- Keep personal information confidential
- · Provide consent
- Review records
